Short Bio	I am a Ballard-based nature and wildlife enthusiast and photographer. Before the pandemic, I spent a lot of time hiking and backpacking; getting as far away from the city as I could up into the mountains. This spring, I spent a lot of time kayaking near Camano Island with gray whales that visit the Salish Sea each year. I then spent 7 weeks on San Juan Island this summer working with the Orca Behavior Institute to collect data on the two distinct Orca populations that spend time in the inland waters. During this time, I had many incredible experiences with a lot of different whales. After returning to Seattle and starting work again, I've gained a stronger appreciation for all of the birds and other animals that live around us.

Short Bio	Seattle based artist, Laurel Jean Minzel, has been gracing Seattle with her art for many years. It began in the culinary arts, sharing passed down family recipes and treasured family photos. For 18 years The Kingfish Cafe was Laurel's artistic outlet. Since the closing of The Kingfish Cafe in 2015, Laurel began exploring her love of the arts.. Being a self taught artist, Laurel has her own unique style of finding the art within the canvas. Using many layers of different colors and textures as a base and then discovering the piece within the colors. Most of her works are based around the black experience, both past and present, telling stories about African American history that aren't commonly taught in your average American textbook. Also shedding light on internal struggles the past can have on the African American community today. Characterizing her art as Black impressionism.

Website	https://tfrickart.com/
Short Bio	T. Frick is a self-taught artist and female entrepreneur. She is a licensed Landscape Architect with a Bachelor's of Science from the University of Wisconsin – Madison. Art has always been a key part of T's life, even as a young child. But it was her training in the architectural field that advanced her drafting, sketching, and painting style. Growing up, T. could be found wandering the backwoods with one of her resident pups or when indoors, she occupied her time with drawing, painting, or other creative hobbies. Her love of nature and the outdoors led to a career in design. When not working, you'll typically find her creating — colors, shapes, textures, and movement creatively come to mind, manifesting into abstract, typically landscape or floral visions. T. will tell you she dreams in trees. They just seem to end up on the canvas! No painting is ever planned. She begins with freedom of expression and movement, mark-making with no preset destination. After multiple sessions, a painting will eventually begin to reveal itself and navigate towards its intended vision. T. is currently working in oil and cold wax, acrylic, and mixed media in an abstract, expressive style. Her paintings are typically smaller in size with larger works on the horizon. Commissions at any scale are available upon request. Check out T's website and join her on an artistic journey through her diverse array of artwork!
